MELKSHAM,

WITH THE CHAPELRY OF SEMINGTON AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

MELKSHAM is a parish, in the hundred of its name—the market town, one of considerable antiquity, is 96 miles w. by s. from London, 30 n.w. from Salisbury, 12 E. from Bath, between 6 and 7 s. from Chippenham, and 5 s. s. E. from Corsham; situated on the line of Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway, on the main road between Bath and the Metropolis, and on the banks of the Avon. It consists principally of one street nearly a mile in length, paved and gas-lighted; the houses are in general good, and built of free-stone, and the town altogether exhibits the aspect of comfort and prosperity. During the Saxon era this was a place of some importance; and at the period of the Norman survey, and for several subsequent reigns, was held in royal demesne, and gave name to an extensive forest. In the reign of Henry VIII it had fallen into decay, but, during the last century, experienced a revival from its cloth manufacture. Its name is derived from melch or milch, 'milk,' and ham, 'a dwelling,' and was formerly spelt Mildnsham and Milsham. The lower part of the town is denominated 'the city,' a presumptive proof of its ancient superiority; and this is farther confirmed by the tailage it paid in the reign of King John, which amounted to twelve marks—Salisbury paying only forty shillings. The only modern buildings are the cheese market and the town hall, erected in 1847 by a company of shareholders, at a cost of £3,350. They form a spacious and well-arranged edifice, in the Italian style of architecture, decidedly ornamental to the town. The town hall contains a spacious apartment, in which the magistrates assemble in petty session for the division, on the last Wednesday in every month. There is also a reading room in the same building, which is well supplied with the leading journals, both metropolitan and provincial. Walter Long, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds a court leet half-yearly. Melksham is a polling station at the election of members to represent North Wilts; and it is included in a circuit of towns under the new County Court Act, for the recovery of debts to any amount not exceeding £50. The manufactures comprise some fine broad cloths, flat and round ropes, and sackings. The Wilts and Berks canal passes to the east of the town, and about a mile and a half from it, to the south, unites with the Kennet and Avon canal.

The parish church of Saint Michael is a large and spacious cruciform edifice, built of free-stone, with a handsome embattled tower rising from the transept: the living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury Cathedral; the present vicar is the Rev. George Home. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and the Society of Friends have places of worship here; and there are schools upon the British and national plans, and for infants. The Melksham Union comprises six parishes: the poor-house is a substantial stone building, pleasantly situated near the pretty village of Semington. The scenery, within the circuit of a few miles round Melksham, is very charming, and the walks on the banks of the Avon remarkably agreeable. Two mineral springs one saline, the other chalybeate, were discovered in the vicinity some years ago, and in 1816 a new saline spa was obtained by boring. From this period it was anticipated that Melksham would advance into note as a watering place, and every accommodation for visitors was provided, including a pump-room, a handsome crescent, an agreeable promenade, a reading-room, and a library; but, with all these inducements, success was not commanded, and a very considerable outlay has been made without a return. The weekly market is held on Tuesday, for butter, poultry, and the usual articles of domestic consumption. On the first Tuesday in every month there is a cheese market; on the first and third Wednesdays monthly are markets for horses and cattle; and an annual fair for animals of the latter kind is held on the 27th of July. The parish of Melksham (including the chapelry of SEEND) contained in 1831, 5,866 inhabitants, and in 1841, 6,236.

SEMINGTON is a chapelry and village, in the parish of Steeple-Ashton, situated on the road between Melksham and Trowbridge, about three miles from either place. There is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists, and near it is the workhouse for the Melksham Union, before mentioned. The population of the chapelry is about 500.

MERE

IS a parish giving name to a hundred—the market town, a small one, is 102 miles w. s. w. from London, 22 west from Salisbury, 7 n. n. w. from Shaftesbury (Dorset), the same distance west from Hindon, and 10 s. from Warminster; situated on the high road from Salisbury and Amesbury to Wincanton. The name of this place is derived from the Saxon word mæra, signifying bounds or limits, and indicates its situation on the borders of Wilts, Dorset, and Somerset. At one time dowlas and bed-ticking was manufactured here somewhat extensively; now the principal branch is silk-throwing, by the firm of Messrs. Butt & Jupe—a very respectable establishment. There are still a few looms occupied in weaving linen, and flax-spinning in connexion therewith employ other hands. This town formerly sent members to parliament, but was disfranchised upon petition of the inhabitants. Courts leet and baron are held annually for the Duchy of Cornwall; but the magisterial business connected with the division and town is transacted at Hindon.

The parish church of Saint Michael is a spacious and handsome building, with a tower at the west end surmounted by spires at the angles. The screen which separates the nave from the chancel is rich open-work, and the belfry has a beautiful carved oak ceiling. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Dean of Salisbury, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Wake; the Rev. Thomas Blundell is his present curate. There is a place of worship for Independents. An endowment, left by Dr. Tateham, of £10. per annum, is ap-
